ROBERTS SEVERE
INFERNO IN THE MILLS OF LAWRENCE

One man is responsible for the infernal conditions in the textile mills at Lawrence—conditions that brought on the present bitter strike, declared Dudley M. Holman, in a written statement, after he had gone to Lawrence as the official representative of Governor Foss and made a careful investigation of the situation.

That one man is William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company. President Wood accepted Mr. Holman's challenge at once and made a reply to Mr. Holman. He declared that Mr. Holman's statement was "unjust" and "incendiary."

LIVING CONDITIONS ARE INTOLERABLE.

INASMUCH as Governor Foss had been appointed by the state senate and city officials of Lawrence to see the mills to Lawrence to preserve the peace, the Governor sent Mr. Holman to Lawrence to see the real facts.

The truth of the matter, as Mr. Holman ascertained it and reported it to the Governor, was expressed in this paragraph of his letter:

"I reported to the Governor that so far as I found out one man was really responsible for the present situation in Lawrence. Public sentiment pointed its finger in one direction—at him. Living conditions as he ordered them are intolerable. A step forward will be taken when we deprive men like him of the special privilege now accorded them by an unwise and unnecessary protection."

No Chance to Hide.

This report to the Governor by his confidential secretary in which President Wood, as the only man named, was called "the most intolerable" brings President Wood, before the country under one of the most remarkable charges ever made against a prominent man.

Under the direction of President Wood the American Woolen Company has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in trying to convince the public that the mills are excellent institutions that should have the greatest favor of the government in the way of land, tariff, so that they could give work at good wages to the thousands of people who live in Lawrence.

BLAME THIS FOR 100 BURGALARIES

Have Staved Off Proboscis. So powerful is the American Woolen Company that it has hitherto been able to stave off any probe that was liable to bring out the facts and it was left to Mr. Holman, secretary to Governor Foss, to start out the naked truth about the Lawrence mills.

This is Mr. Holman's statement in full, as Miss Mary Boyle O'Brien, who had been making an investigation of the Lawrence strike.

For the human side of the industrial problem receives generally but scant attention, the manufacturers are much more anxious for their machines to run and still find this for the best and most profitable way to run the mills.

PLUCKY RESCUE BY ARLINGTON BOY

William Robinson, a son of Town Clerk Robinson, of Arlington, made a plucky rescue when he pulled Edward Keefe, twelve years old, of No. 18 Moreland street, from the jaws of a crocodile. Keefe was skating with his dog, down a piece of new ice when he leaped into the water. The crocodile was waiting for him and was about to swallow him when Robinson saw him and pulled him out. Robinson was then taken to the hospital and is now recovering from his injuries.

SANDWICH LAWRENCE IS 'FRAMING'

LAWRENCE, Jan. 25.—A report of State police officials under command of Captain Foss of the State police, and a final thorough investigation of the "framing" surrounding the shooting of the dynamite in Lawrence, Jan. 24, is a result of which it was found that the whole affair was a "frame-up."

Police officials state that no other, other than the one named, was involved in the dynamite. The police are working on a new theory. It is now being charged that the "framing" was done by the "framing" men, who were paid to do the work.

Call It a "Frame-up."

Chief Noy of the State Police, in charge of the investigation of the dynamite in Lawrence, has said today: "The State Police have been working on the dynamite case for some little time and are still finding every energy to unravel the mystery. We believe that the whole affair was a 'frame-up'."

"It is possible that some newspaper man was told of it so that he could get a good story. We are making a thorough investigation into Lawrence for the purpose of doing justice to the men who were charged with the crime. We propose to find out, once and for all, whether the dynamite was put where it was found by the men who were charged with the crime. A man who would do such a thing is the greatest scoundrel in the world."

IN COURT TO-MORROW.

The six men and four women who were charged with the crime in Lawrence, will be arraigned tomorrow morning before Judge J. J. Mahoney, who has already sentenced several other strikers to prison. These people are: Farris, Marat, and others.

HUNT THREE MEN HERE'S HOW TO FOR GEM THEFT SOOTHE NERVES

By SYBIL WARNE.
Are your nerves frayed?
Sh! Sh! Be quiet.
To keep your nerves from being out of tune at a time and do it well.
When you sit down to a breakfast, do not think of all the troubles that have lately come upon you to make the nerves frayed. For this that you sit and drink in the spirit of your heart.
This will set at naught your nerves. In coming your hair, do not think of everything else but this special act, but think that you are coming your hair, and if anything comes to disturb your peace of mind, you can meet it by your concentration of mind upon the thing that you are doing.
To Katharine K. Pryde of the Bank, who is one of the calmest women in Boston, believe that a few simple rules of the above will start the frayed nerves of the Boston society women. It is the general complaint that more women to-day are nervous than ever before because they try to do too many things at once. They are not content with their own work, but want to do everything else as well. They are not content with their own work, but want to do everything else as well. They are not content with their own work, but want to do everything else as well.

Do You Know That—

The Yellow Face, which is the official gazette of Peking, and has just celebrated its twentieth anniversary, is the oldest newspaper in the world. Just since its founding a copy of each issue has been carefully preserved in the archives of the Peking Palace. Accidents have always been the bane of this paper, and, in order to maintain its high standard, several journals on its staff in the past had the penalty of exile with their lives, and, at the worst, hanging, for the punishment served out at present.

An author, Mr. Desmond, who has a major hotel in a cemetery near the Chinese, followed the general custom of visiting the graves of dead relatives on the eve of All Souls, but he did so in an unusual way. He landed at a place a little outside the usual ground, and went to his brother's grave, where he left some flowers. He then returned to his apartment and flew back to the press.

The Montague Glass stories, by the author of the famous Potash and Perlmutter ("Abie" and "Mavrus"), are a regular feature of the Sunday AMERICAN.

PART—Continued.

"THE great index," he went on, "which includes the last sentence, 'could such perfect Prince Arletto be his successor.' He really doesn't want to marry. Between ourselves, he regards marriage as rather a bore. But, of course, being a German Grand Duke, he is bound to marry. He owes it to his country, to Posen."

"I am a cipher, an obedient soldier," he said, "and I shall get out of the terrace."

As they entered the dining-room, Prince Arletto, who had been waiting for them, stopped Mr. Desmond and handed him a letter.

"Just come, sir, by messenger," said Prince Arletto.

Desmond dropped behind a second with his father.

"Leave me alone with this boy a little—here's a dear parent," he whispered to himself.

"The Prince and the Plutocrat; or, The Grand Babylon Hotel"

Arnold Bennett's Great Mystery Story

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

THE opening scene is laid in the magnificent dining room of the Grand Babylon Hotel, London's greatest hotel. Jules, the head waiter, announces a table occupied by two persons, and in a spirit of mischievousness, order and so. This time Jules returns to the table and informs the millionaire that Prince Arletto, who is to be married, has never heard of before. The head waiter's duty is to attend the millionaire, but the latter is obstinate, and insists upon the drink being served. He finally goes away, but leaves the family of Jules, who feels that he has been treated. Jules later tells Miss Spencer, who is in charge of the hotel office, that he will make Mr. Rackadee as comfortable as he can.

Before arriving there, however, he had discovered that in some mysterious manner the work of the change of proprietors had been the way down the street of the hotel's common.

The corridor looked with it, and even underfoot was to be seen discussing the thing just as though it mattered to him.

"I have a cigar, Mr. Rackadee," said the waiter, "and a mouthful of the good wine in the cellar."

In a few minutes the two were talking eagerly again.

Prince Arletto was astonished at Rackadee's capacity for absorbing the details of hotel management, and for the first time he began to realize that Prince Arletto was a prince of hotel managers.

It had never occurred to Rackadee before that to manage a hotel was a large hotel, and he was now realizing that it could make any excessive demand upon the brains of the manager, but he was not to be deterred.

The next evening Rackadee and his only child, Selma, a beautiful young woman, sat themselves in the dining room, and in a spirit of mischievousness, order and so. This time Jules returns to the table and informs the millionaire that Prince Arletto, who is to be married, has never heard of before. The head waiter's duty is to attend the millionaire, but the latter is obstinate, and insists upon the drink being served. to be careful, as the hotel is a lot of color, schemes and plots of various governments. Rackadee returns to the dining room and is introduced by his daughter to Prince Arletto of Posen, English companion to Prince Arletto of Posen. Rackadee is astonished to see Jules give Desmond a knowing wink while waiting at the table. Rackadee learns from Desmond that Prince Arletto is one of the Grand Duke of Posen, who occupies a dual throne. Desmond also declares that once the Grand Duke marries and leaves as he. Prince Arletto will succeed to the throne—something which he does not look forward to.

A Bitter Blow

THE topic in the skunkhouse was football.

The skunkhouse looking man in the corner got more and more excited.

"Football," he cried loudly, "is a curse and a disaster. It is an abomination and a blot on our boasted civilization."

He glared round to see if anyone disagreed with him, but not a single murmur came.

Starting off again, he thumped his fist on the old oak table, until the timbers rang and rattled.

"The very index of football," he shouted, "is enough to make any decent, respectable man go and shoot himself out of pure disgust."

"The only grammar present turned to the speaker."

"This grammar seems to have very good feelings on the subject."

"Oh, yes," agreed most heartily.

"It has," said the landlord again. "All kinds of feeling killed at once."

"Very sad, indeed, poor fellow! What was the result?"

"It was the wife's not 'satisfactory' was the landlord's reply."

THERE WAS TO COME A TURN-UP—A TURN-UP.

A skunkhouse looking man in the corner got more and more excited.

Joe, you look down in the mouth. Don't allow yourself to get too much of an upset about your girl throwing you over the board's worth it. I know, old chap."

"You don't think I'm wearing over that, do you? She won't look me up again, and I shall be a failure with her."

"Mr. Kitten—I suppose you think that a man who desires his wife."

"Miss Kitten—oh, no. Why, it would be impossible for the average man to get a wife if he didn't desire her."

Simplify Education

That Is to Be One Important Task of the Future—and It Ought
Not to Be Delayed

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Company

We publish below an excellent letter on education written by one of our readers. And we recommend this letter to those that have in their hands the responsibility of public education.

The day will come when the education of children will be as much a delight to them as their play. It will be actually a PART OF THEIR PLAY.

In that day when teaching, labor, education and all other human effort shall be made ATTRACTIVE, as Fourier taught many years ago that all effort should be, a child will learn in a few weeks what it learns now in months or even in years.

The writer of this letter is on the right track:

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—The editorial printed awhile ago in the Sunday AMERICAN on education by moving pictures was great.

Millions have no education today because to get education is torture.

Here is a small example of how modern education is complicated. Take arithmetic and read some of the definitions therein.

"A number expressed by an integer and a fraction is called a mixed number." Isn't it actually a crime to twist up a sentence with such wording as "A number expressed by an integer, etc." That somewhat tangled, twisted way of writing ought to be a criminal offense on the statute books. If an editor should write a newspaper like that nobody would read it. If a play writer wrote a play like that it would play to empty seats, yet it is proper to write text books so they can't be understood because the audience is compelled by law to read them. It is worse than beating a child.

Here are some more simple and clearly expressed definitions from a standard arithmetic.

"A number that expresses whole units is called an integer or integral number."

"A number used in connection with something is called a concrete number."

"A number used without reference to any particular thing is called an abstract number."

"The process of taking one number as many times as there are units in another is called multiplication."

I remember vividly how that last definition puzzled me in school and how I never did learn what it meant. In fact, I never learned arithmetic until I had quit school in disgust on account of the torture of getting education. Then arithmetic came to me easily because the plain examples of it in business unfolded it to me in simple form.

If I were a leading educator of these wonderful times in which we live, I would be ashamed to admit that the text books of today are written so that pupils cannot possibly understand them.

I would be ashamed to admit that the text books of today are written so that pupils cannot possibly understand them.

I would be ashamed to admit that the text books of today are written so that pupils cannot possibly understand them.

I would be ashamed to admit that the text books of today are written so that pupils cannot possibly understand them.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

LAWRENCE MILL DIVIDENDS

Editor AMERICAN:
You gave us in the Sunday AMERICAN the dividends of the Pacific Mills of Lawrence, which are too big altogether. Surely, they could grant as large amounts of money. Would you also give us the dividends of the Wood Mill, the Arlington Mills—fact, of all the mills, since 1910?

Lowell.
The Sunday AMERICAN, sent Sunday, January 28, will print a list of the dividends of the Lawrence Mills. These figures, showing the profits to stockholders, from the most startling contribution yet made to the Lawrence situation, the sure to get sent Sunday's AMERICAN.
